TEENS AND SUBSTANCE ABUSE

DISCUSSION THREE: “THE NEW NORMAL”

Thurs, Apr 10 at 7:00 pm, CP Library

Today’s adolescent drug culture has changed. In the old days, everyone looked to the classic “stoner” subculture as the key participants in substance experimentation and abuse. However, we are now finding that drug and alcohol use is becoming more pervasive among student groups who previously might have been considered unlikely - your high level athletes, top academic achievers, and more. In fact, many young people are hiding behind that “good kid” image, or even using it as justification that with high achievement comes a certain right to “celebrate”.

In this evening’s discussion we will look at how the adolescent drug culture has changed over the years, with input from professionals, parents, and some of the young people themselves.

Please join Jason Lechner, MFT, College Park’s own support counselor and addiction specialist for an open discussion. With ten years of experience, Jason can answer your questions and get you the information needed to help your child deal with the substance abuse issues occurring at every school.

Is there substance use and abuse in high school athletics?

Are high academic achievers immune from substance abuse or experimentation?

Is the classic “stoner” subculture of the past still in play today?

Please join us, because the old line of “Not My Child” may not be as true as it used to be.
